

Untitled

There are limits
to everything including

all I ask ask
ask about before your answers blur

and subtleties swim
in the sordid
language of daily

misappropriations,
those sugarcoated
sins

of an opaque
system,
you keeping your

sacred secret
with salt and poison

for the wounds
and throats
of the apathetic.

Michael Geyer
© 2012

Published in For a Better World 2012: Poems and Drawings on Peace and Justice, Cincinnati: Ghosn Publishing, 2012, pg. 41. Print

